AEROSOL – New Exhibition Launches at dot-art Gallery

AEROSOL is the third exhibition at the new dot-art Gallery and launches on Friday 15th July 2016. It features work by three Liverpool based artists whose work employs the use of spray paint; David Andrews, Jessica Arrowsmith-Stanley and Nathan Pendlebury and explores the range of styles, imagery and subjects encompassed by the medium.

The gallery, which is off Castle Street in Liverpool's commercial district, opened in February 2016 and has already hosted exhibitions showcasing experimental photography and visual love letters to Liverpool, now aims to bring work which may look more at home on the city streets than an art gallery, to the attention of the public.

United through their shared expertise of mixed media, the exhibition showcases abstracts, landscapes and graphical artworks created with spray paint by the three featured artists. Influenced by the medium's movement, style, culture and function, expect bold, vibrant and contemporary compositions ranging from paintings to screen-prints to typography.
